"I want to acknowledge that I am speaking on behalf of the Anonymous Community Member, which is the Collective Community Organization (CCO). The CCO is a group that represents the interests of indigenous communities in Canada.

The CCO is committed to advocating for the needs and rights of indigenous people who have been disproportionately impacted by cancer. We recognize the struggles faced by our communities and the need for culturally appropriate and accessible cancer care.

We call for increased funding and resources for indigenous cancer research and treatment programs. We also demand greater involvement and representation of indigenous voices in the decision-making processes of cancer care policies.

We encourage all members of the community to support and promote these causes. Together, we can make a difference in the lives of our people.
